I've completed eight storytime sessions from January to March, and I've started another set of six sessions in May, which will run until mid-June. After a short break, I plan to hold a summer session for children aged six and younger to get them involved in the SRC activities. It's challenging to write three original reports about storytime each year. For now, I've only included the attendee's chart that demonstrates the storytime is well attended, and feedback from parents indicates that children are excited and love coming.
